

Now is a splendid time to have those pictures taken.

Before the holiday rush begins we can take plenty of time to get acquainted and bring out your best points.

Also—we have some interesting things in new style mountings.

ELECTION NOTES

George R. Carter called his Bull Moose friends here yesterday afternoon that it "looks like Roosevelt." The cablegram was received by C. G. Heiser of the Trent Trust company, and Heiser joyfully flourished it in the faces of his Republican and Democratic friends who haven't been giving Roosevelt more than an outside chance. The cablegram said:

"Taff hopeless. Democrats nervous. Looks like Roosevelt."

U. S. District Attorney Breckons had a bad fall down a flight of stairs at Waikeke last evening. He had been down the country campaigning with Kuhio on election eve. He fell down a mill stairway and was hurt but declined to let a little thing like that keep him out of the big doings election eve.

Ballot boxes were sent to all city precincts yesterday by City Clerk Kakuokalani's staff. The outside precincts received their ballot boxes last Saturday. The clerk's office kept up its usual good record in seeing that all boxes were out on time.

Banks closed at noon today and most of the business houses were closed all day. Under the law, the saloons have to remain closed until six o'clock this evening.

Republican leaders this morning declared optimistically that they would make a clean sweep of the county ticket.

BOTH PARTIES CLAIM WILL ELECT MAYOR

Col. C. J. McCarthy last night issued an election forecast on the Mayoralty, giving Fern the lead by four hundred votes. His forecast is:

Fern	1700
Parker	1800
Hustace	1500
	3200
	800

The Republican forecast yesterday afternoon was:

Parker	1882
Fern	1757
Hustace	1618
	1916
	3534
Spilled Ballots	485
	241
	726

DEMOCRATS BUSY FROM EARLY MORN

There was an absence of bustle at Democratic headquarters in the Waikeke building, in the early hours of the morning, which merely betokened that the hustlers were out on the firing line. Now and again strains of soft harmonies floated through the corridor, from a lei-bedecked female glee club stationed at the top of the stairs. It was expected that the tuneless would be given a round of the polls about midday, to cheer the workers and lure votes to the cause with guitar and voice. This depended on there being an automobile to spare at that time.

B. G. Rivenburgh, chairman of the county committee, was at headquarters by 6.30 a. m., but there was not much doing until the autos rolled up to report for duty and were sent to their stations.

"We have plenty of autos," Mr. Rivenburgh said. "There is one for every precinct, and in some cases two. We have twenty-five machines altogether."

A captain was allotted to every precinct, in some cases having an alternate. It is not every precinct in the United States that will have the distinction of the second of the fourth here today, whose Wilsonian captain is a man who this year won world renown in presence of people of all nations. Reference is to Duke Kahanamoku, champion short distance swimmer of the world, as he proved himself to be at the Olympic games in Stockholm, Sweden, the past summer. In politics Duke happens not to be in the same boat with his good friend, William Rawlins, who took a leading part in sending him to Stockholm and in giving him triumphant welcome home.

Democratic Captains in Fourth.

Following is the list of Democratic precinct captains in the fourth district:

1st precinct—Sol. Meheula.
2nd precinct—Duke Kahanamoku;
D. Halemano, alternate.
3rd precinct—C. H. Rose; Alua
Moepono, alternate.
4th precinct—A. E. Carter.
5th precinct—J. W. Asch.
6th precinct—Charles Lake.
7th precinct—J. H. Wilson.
8th precinct—William M. Samson.
9th precinct—Joseph Paku.
10th precinct—John Nahinu.
12th precinct—Kahalepuna.

HOSPITAL NURSE IS MARRIED

Sails Without Husband on the Sierra for Home in Idaho

The San Francisco Bulletin of October 25 contains the following story that is of local interest:

The Oceanic steamer Sierra slipped into the harbor between showers this morning from Honolulu with the lonest honeymooner who has ever arrived at this port.

The newlywed was Mrs. Horace Keeler, a former trained nurse at the Queen's Hospital, in the islands, who was married to one of Hawaii's prosperous underwriters at 9 o'clock on Saturday morning, the sailing day of the Sierra, and who departed at noon, three hours later, for her home at Pocatello, Idaho.

Mrs. Keeler hung far over the steamer's rail waving good-bye and tossing kisses to her husband until the Sierra had pointed its nose toward the open seas and passed out of sight of Diamond Head.

The husband was left standing, a forlorn figure on the wharf, a tear on either cheek, and with nothing but his empty undertaking parlor to go back to. He must remain until such time as he can dispose of his interests in and about Honolulu, when he, too, will purchase a ticket and hasten across land and sea to his blushing bride.

The wedding event brought to a happy close a romance which sprang up last April between Miss Louise Whipple, then a nurse at the hospital, and Horace Keeler, who came to have his appendix removed. When Keeler was nursed back to health he very graciously gave the credit to Miss Whipple. Then he popped the question—ever old, ever new.

At first the nurse declined, having in mind the rule of the hospital that no married nurses need expect to hold a position in the institution. She said she was undecided whether to marry and settle down or remain as a nurse. Keeler, not have this, and his plea finally won Miss Whipple's consent.

That evening she was told that while the hospital authorities had to part with her, it was only with a great deal of regret and a sincere desire that she have a happy married life.

RETURNS FROM PRECINCTS

that "Kakaako" is pretty quiet this year.

Of the total registration of 446 a ballot of 253 had been cast at 2 p. m. This is the largest precinct in Honolulu, yet voting has progressed in such orderly manner and so rapidly that only 50 ballots remained to be cast in the last three hours of the day. The inspectors were kept constantly at work and the booths were filled steadily during the first four hours.

The only voters remaining, it was figured, were the Honolulu railway employees, who will vote during the last hour, as they return home from their work. This is the city's most congested district, where trouble is invariably anticipated, but despite the big crowd around the polling place nothing untoward had occurred. Democratic partisans were making a demonstration nearby, with a hand and campaign oratory. A noticeable feature this year at this point is the absence of drunkenness around the polling booth.

Seventh Precinct, Fourth District.

At 10:30 o'clock this morning 117 out of 310 registered voters had been cast in this precinct. The polling place is at the board of health building in a booth under a banyan tree. At one time this morning there were twenty or more of the candidates in sight, most of them claiming individual victories. Mayor Fern, Charles Hustace, John Markham, John W. Cathcart, Joe Cohen, Col. McCarthy and others were busy watching the "Kakaako bunch" in the sixth and seventh precincts.

Eighth Precinct, Fourth District.

The election moved smoothly in the Eighth of the Fourth, the polling place for which is on Emma Square. By 11:45 181 votes had been marked on the sheet, more than 50 per cent of the total registration of 339. The straight Democratic ticket was making a good run, according to rumor, while the Republicans were getting a split vote.

Several members of the police force put in an appearance shortly before noon, and asked if there was anything for them to do in the way of quelling riots, but the election officers gave them the laugh, the voting during the morning being about the most quiet and orderly on record. There were no fights of any kind, and the workers for both parties confined their arguments entirely to moral suasion.

At 1:50 this afternoon the total vote polled was 246.

Ninth Precinct, Fourth District.

Out of a total registration of 487, the largest of any precinct in the city, 253 votes had been polled at 12:25 this afternoon. The voting was heavy from 11 o'clock on, the rate being about one per minute.

When the polls opened this morning, "Soap Box" Barron Link McCandless' handy man, entered a protest against the make-up of the election board, claiming that the rights of the Democratic party had been overlooked in the appointment of all three Republican inspectors.

"It was originally intended," said Barron that John Townsend should be the Democratic inspector. It seems there are two persons by the name in this precinct, and McCandless sent the notice of appointment to the Republican John Townsend. We found out the mistake the next day and asked the secretary to make the change, but this he wouldn't do. I entered a protest merely to safeguard our rights."

From a straw vote taken of those who were willing to talk over their ballot, it seemed that McCandless was making a strong run. The Democrats claimed 70 per cent of the vote cast, for the head of their ticket, E. H. Paris was being knifed, according to polling place rumor.

Tenth Precinct, Fourth District.

There was very little stir around this polling place, corner Nuuanu and Bates streets, the registration being small and confined largely to the residence district. The vote came fairly strong in the early morning, and then fell off toward the noon hour. It is expected that there will be some late votes in just before the polls close.

The total registration in the tenth of the fourth is 156, and of this number 79 had cast their ballots at 11:30, and 91 at 12:20. What electrifying was being done around the polls seemed to come from the Democrats, their badges being more in evidence than those of Republican workers.

Eleventh Precinct, Fourth District.

Waikanae—A telephone message from that precinct to the Star-Bulletin at 1:30 p. m. stated that voting is slow and light, only a small number of the registered voters being cast up to that hour. Republican prospects reported very bright here.

Twelfth Precinct, Fourth District.

This is a PUNCHBOWL precinct, the booth being on PUNCHBOWL street near the Pauoa stream bridge. It is considered by the Democrats as their strongest precinct in proportion to total vote, but Republican workers claimed to be doing better than they expected. At noon L. L. McCandless put in an appearance in a big motor car, and made a short speech that was received with cheers.

Republican candidates made frequent trips to this precinct, and throughout the morning there was a steady stream of motors carrying of steady-seekers of that party. The Democrats seemed serenely confident of sweeping the precinct, and a good many of the candidates gave it the go-by altogether.

At 12:10 this afternoon 134 votes had been polled out of a total registration of 336.

At 2:25 this afternoon 262 votes had been polled out of the total 336 registered. At least fifty more are on the lists to be voted after 3 o'clock, and more are waiting to spend them to the polls.

"Nothing doing," said the police officer on duty, when asked if there had been any election rows. "This is the quietest election ever known in this PUNCHBOWL precinct."

Fifth District.

Voting was heavy and regular in the town precincts of the fifth district all morning. Crowds at the polling places were not large, excepting at the Kalili booths and not very large there. Almost good order prevailed. There was neither sight nor smell of booze anywhere, and inquiry failed to locate anything resembling "open house" in any precinct.

Split voting was suspected to some extent in most places, but was alleged in formidable amount only in the Kalia-Kaliwaena precinct. Although the independent candidates for senator and mayor, Cohen and Hustace, claimed each a big support, the regular party men nowhere conceded anything of the kind.

It appeared as if the Republicans were doing the hardest work in every precinct, an air of lassitude being evident with Democratic badge wearers. While of course each side made boasts in only one or two cases did the workers put forth obviously ridiculous pretences.

Shortly before 11 o'clock a Star-Bulletin reporter made a round of the seven town precincts of the fifth, ending at 12 o'clock, and obtained statements of the polling progress and estimates from party men of all stripes.

Ninth Precinct, Fifth District.

At 11:15 there were 240 votes cast out of a registration of 508, and the waiting line was not long. Democrats claimed the precinct was going strongly Democratic. Republicans claimed they were holding their own. W. A. Kane, former Republican supervisor, said there was lots of split voting, but could not say on which side it was.

Joel C. Cohen and Charles Hustace were at the poll when the reporter called. Cohen said the independent vote was strong all over the fifth, and Hustace agreed with him.

Tenth Precinct, Fifth District.

The polling place of this precinct is on the Kalihiwaena school grounds. At 10:50 o'clock 115 had voted out of a total registration of 302. It was figured that a total vote of 280 would be polled.

William E. Miles, Democratic captain said: "I think we will carry two-thirds Democratic straight. The whole Democratic ticket will lead in this precinct. McCandless will have a big majority. Republicans are splitting this way—Pacheco, Petrie, McClellan, Markham, Cox, Bartlett and Eno. Pacheco, McClellan and Petrie are especially strong."

Freddy Egan, Republican, said of this split: "That's a good ticket. Pacheco is a good man. We want a supervisor who lives out here."

H. A. Franston, Republican: "This is a strong Democratic precinct, but I think we will break even. I think we will be able to hold our own."

At Noon.

At noon today, one hundred and fifty-five votes out of a total registration of 302 had been cast. Quiet reigned at the polling place during the midday. An early vote presented itself at this precinct. During the first hour following the opening of the polls a heavy vote was cast. Democratic workers near the polls predicted a heavy vote for their party candidates. The Republicans are also optimistic and it is believed that the rush of voters may be expected at the last moment.

Independent candidates in this precinct are not much to the fore, though their runners are busy and express hopes for a good showing in the counting of the ballots.

Eleventh Precinct, Fifth District.

The booth for this precinct is opposite Kakuokalani school. Out of a registration of 508 voters, 280 had cast their ballots at 11:35 Rudolf Duncan, Republican, said: "The Republican vote is very strong. Our candidates for mayor and sheriff are running away ahead of expectations, as also is the senatorial ticket. We expect to put six supervisors in the lead here. He claimed there had been 180 straight Republican votes cast at that hour, and declared that only two votes had been cast for the independent candidates.

No Democrat could be found who would venture an estimate of strength. One claimed they were stronger than two years ago.

A steady vote from the time of the opening of the polls is recorded in this precinct. At eleven-forty this morning, 300 votes had been cast out of a total registration of 503.

A good Republican vote is confidently predicted here. The Democratic workers point to the fact that this is Parker's precinct and the candidate is meeting with much opposition.

The sentiment expressed at this polling place today was that both Parker for Mayor and Parker for Sheriff would carry the precinct. Costa for Deputy Sheriff is said to be polling a strong vote also. It is stated that the voter casting a straight ballot in this precinct is looked upon as a curiosity. Quiet prevailed and little or no disturbance has thus far been noted.

Twelfth precinct, Fifth District.

This poll is at Liliha and School streets. The registry is 141 voters, and at 11:30 o'clock 97 had voted. A Democratic messenger said his party vote was coming out all right, and he did not know if there was any splitting.

Democrats claimed everything in sight at this precinct during the morning hours, while Republican party workers were not far behind in making optimistic predictions.

Walter Coombs, Republican, said that up to that time 52 straight Republican votes had been deposited. At

5000 PERSONS ATTEND RALLY AT AALA

With one of the largest political crowds ever seen in Honolulu, an audience conservatively estimated at 5000 persons which nearly filled Aala square, the Democratic spellbinders brought their 1912 campaign to an enthusiastic and most propitious end yesterday evening.

The Republican parade, with its band and bright pyrotechnical display marched down King street past the Aala meeting early in the evening, on its way to the Republican rally at the Capitol square, but had little effect on the throng gathered to glean wisdom from the mouths of the Democratic spellbinders and wisecracks.

Nearly every candidate on the Democratic ticket made his final plea to the electorate, repeating the timeworn phrases and injecting a few new ideas occasionally that brought responses of cheering and hand-clapping. There was a sprinkling of rain at intervals but it had little effect on the crowd, which is accustomed to moisture, and for the most part the voters remained, standing in the wet grass, to the end of the long program.

Like all Democratic meetings, this one had its spectacular denunciations, a surprise to the audience. Last night it was the speech of G. F. Aiona, a Republican, for years and a member of two or three legislatures from the Republican party on Hawaii. He went to the meeting to listen and write, as a reporter for a local newspaper, and remained to speak, flinging forth in a wild denunciation of Delegate Kahanamoku.

He asserted he is still a Republican, but could not stomach Kuhio and his record, though he had supported him in the past. He based his excuse for swinging away from the Republican leader on the argument, already old and many times revamped by orators, that the Delegate had declared in Washington he had been elected four years ago through the bribery of the people by the sugar planters.

He declared Culp vacillating and inconsistent in denouncing the land laws framed by the legislature in his presence and with his silent approval, and said that his recitation would be a slap in the President's face, after the latter had shown his opinion of Kuhio by announcing he intends reappointing Governor Fernal, despite the Delegate's protests. In a burst of impassioned oratory he shouted:

"Do we want to slap the President in the face by sending back as Delegate a man who has promised to continue to make trouble, and to bring upon us eventually a commission form of government and the loss of the franchise?"

"I have campaigned with Kuhio and from my own personal experience I have found him vacillating and insincere. Kuhio broke his word to the people of PUNCHBOWL. He shows his inconsistency in denouncing the land laws. When these laws were before the special session of the legislature he supported them. Kuhio sat at the right hand of the speaker and never opened his mouth to object to any single feature in them."

"When I go to the polls tomorrow I shall forget the halo which we imagine surrounds the head of this man we call Prince, and I shall vote as a free American citizen against him, and urge you all to do the same."

The various speakers were introduced by Bertram G. Rivenburgh, chairman of the Democratic county committee, and as they stepped to the front of the platform Mrs. Sharp, of the Woman's Suffrage League, hung wreaths of leis around their necks. Mrs. John Wilson, speaking in Hawaiian, addressed her people eloquently on behalf of the Democratic platform, because it contains a plank favoring woman suffrage.

least thirty Democrats had split their votes, Mr. Coombs said, and Hustace had so far got only four votes.

An early vote was recorded. At 11:45 this morning 103 votes out of a total of 148 for the precinct had been cast. The Twelfth made one of the best showings in the list of precincts in the Fifth as far as a possibility of an early and full vote was concerned.

Both parties declare that the voters are scratching their tickets. Kakuokalani, Republican candidate for the senate, is believed will lead his ticket in this precinct.

Thirteenth Precinct, Fifth District.

Polling place, Kakuokalani and Nuuanu streets. There was a choice collection of big guns here, including Senator Judd, Mayor Fern, L. L. McCandless and Jack Kalakela. The registration is 328, and at 11:40 o'clock 180 had voted. Mayor claimed everything lovely for the Democrats. Kalakela was specific, saying the Democrats had the precinct two to one. The reporter had to enter the laughter sign at this to give a true report of how this claim was received Senator Judd, in presence of the candidate for Congress, said: "McCandless will do well if he gets as many votes as he did two years ago—and this is his home precinct."

McCandless, smiling, simply retorted, "McCandless hopes he (Judd) will be mistaken."

Fourteenth Precinct, Fifth District.

This polling place is on Vineyard street, west of Nuuanu stream. A very small crowd was at the booth. There are 490 voters registered, out of which 251 had voted at 11:50. The Republicans claimed that they were piling up a big majority. The independent vote they said was very weak. "They won't get ten votes," one worker said. Willie Crawford said there was a lot of splitting in to find a Democrat to say anything, until the old warhorse, J. M. Peepoe, was accosted, who gave it as his "mana" that 140 straight Democratic votes had been cast.

Fifteenth Precinct, Fifth District.

At 11:05 a. m. 225 had voted out of a total registration of 500. Balloting was early and heavy and, as the figures indicate, nearly 50 percent of the entire vote had been cast in the first three hours following the opening of the poll. Mayor Fern was conspicuous in the large crowd of citizens and joking and apparently not the least bit worried as to the outcome, at least so far as his own candidacy is concerned.

At 11:22 a. m. a ballot of 105 had been cast out of a total registration of 252. Though party workers were busy engaged rushing electors up to this booth by automobile and hack, the voting was regarded as somewhat slower than in the neighboring precincts although the figures show nearly half the electorate of the precinct would have cast their ballot by noon.

Aala Park, the scene of a thousand political rallies, is the location of the booth of this precinct. With 252 on the register, 121 had voted at 11:55: It was heard to obtain any definite statement from anybody here. Col. Knox said the Republican cause was looking good. "Sam Parker is running ahead like a scared cat," the veteran of the fighting precincts of Kalihi said. He also said the voting was "straight."—The most that could be gotten from the Democrats was that they were "doing pretty good," as one of them put it. The same authority had it that both sides were splitting.

Thirteenth Precinct, Fifth District. A big vote had been recorded at this precinct by ten o'clock this morning. At noon the line of voters had reached 210 with a total registration of 323. Republican and Democratic party workers are active in this precinct, which is predicted will hold up a fine majority for many of the Republican candidates.

Fern buttons and Parker badges were conspicuous within the prescribed limits of the polling place. Jarrett and Parker have workers out and both express confidence in the winning proclivities of their respective candidates in the race for sheriff. Petrie and McClellan have hopes of carrying this precinct.

Melody Cheers Laggard Voters.

A big automobile filled with Hawaiian musicians and sent through the city under the auspices of the Democratic party visited all the city polling precincts during the morning hours. At the several polling places brief stops were made and Hawaiian airs were rendered amid the cheers of the party workers assembled there. Mayor J. J. Fern was a visitor to many precincts this morning, the municipal auto being kept in constant service.

Licenses Commissioners Are Busy.

Willard Brown and License Inspector Pennell, were active today in their efforts to repress the use of liquor in the vicinity of the polling places.

Yesterday word was quietly passed around by members of the board of License Commissioners that no foolishness would be tolerated at the various precincts as far as the use of liquor was concerned.

Inspector Pennell made a general tour of all city precincts this morning with a view of determining whether the provisions of the law was being carried out to the letter.

Little or no drunkenness was found at the polling places. Both Republican and Democratic leaders received
